Spain: Top Spanish authorities are concerned over the political overtones of current student demonstrations in Madrid, although no immediate threat to the regime is in prospect.

The rector has closed two major schools of the University of Madrid indefinitely as a result of student unrest, and further repressive measures may result from a big demonstration planned for today.

The underlying cause, which has led to strikes in the past, is student dissatisfaction over compulsory membership in the state-controlled Spanish students' union. The current situation has been aggravated by police brutality in repressing a protest against that organization.

If the students persist in efforts to organize a rival syndicate, the regime will have to crack down hard, at the risk of arousing greater antagonism, or be prepared to see its system of state controls challenged by other groups as well. [REDACTED]

NOTES

*Malawi: [Former education minister Chipembere, who began a guerrilla campaign against Prime Minister Banda last month, has now warned Banda that he will strike again this week and seize control of the government. Chipembere's raid of 12 February on a district headquarters less than 100 miles from Zomba, the capital, indicated that he can make significant trouble. His followers, however, probably could not seize Zomba except in the unlikely event that the two infantry companies and the substantial police force there defect to the dissidents.]
